Crowd of 20,000 Witnesses Spectacular Air Race Program at Candler Field Sunday.

HUGE THROGGLED BY PILOTS' DARING

First Prizes Won by Errett Williams, Lieutenant Donaldson, Dick Statham and Paul Davis

As a score of skilled air pilots brought the spectacular stunts and speed tests of the Atlanta air races to a conclusion Sunday afternoon at Candler field, it became known that Doug Davis, one of the best aviators in the south, will make an effort early next spring to break the transcontinental air record of Captain Frank Hawks.

Thrill after thrill held the crowds spellbound Saturday and Sunday afternoons at the local airport, when the foremost pilots of this section put their ships through various paces. The largest crowd assembled on Sunday, when the most sensational of the air stunts were staged. More than 20,000 persons saw Davis flit with death in his "Mystery" Traveler low-wing monoplane, which he will use in his record attempt from New York to Los Angeles.

Each one of the 20,000 gasped with amazement as Davis twisted and twirled his little ship about at 1,500 feet—a ship that from 50 to 100 feet—a ship that at one time resembled a swallow dashing through the dusk of early evening and at another a falling leaf blown by a strong autumn draft.

First place winners in Sunday's air events were: Errett Williams, Greater Atlanta race; Dick Statham, OX single ignition motor race; Lieutenant John M. Donaldson, race; George Shale, national guard race; and Paul Davis, balloon bursting contest.

Captain Hawks' record for the New York to Los Angeles flight is 17 hours and 25 minutes. Doug, who made the hop from New York to Atlanta in the "Mystery," hopes to make the hop in 15 hours and 15 minutes. He also hopes to make the hop in 15 hours and 15 minutes. He also hopes to make the hop in 15 hours and 15 minutes.

Every available foot of parking space at the field was in use on Sunday afternoon, and in addition to the crowd at the hangar line, every high spot around the edges of the field boasted its allotment of "rail birds." One of the worst traffic jams in the history of Candler field resulted from the appearance of the "Mystery" and the "Traveler." Cars crawled along the roads at a snail's pace, and frequently lines of traffic were halted for 5 minutes.

Only two ships participated in the national guard race for the southern championship. Lieutenant John M. Donaldson, pilot, and Sergeant Walter Bloodworth, observer, raced to victory on the nine-mile course in 4 minutes and 16 seconds, defeating Captain K. D. Brabston, pilot, and Lieutenant George Ryan, Jr., observer, who made the distance in 4 minutes and 18 seconds. Both ships were from Birmingham.

Dick Statham, a Bird, took first place in the OX single ignition motor race with a time of 8 minutes and 21 seconds for the 15 miles, winning $200 prize money. George Shale, in a Travel Air, was second with 8 minutes and 36 seconds, winning $100 in prize money. Third place and $50 prize money went to Paul Davis, who made the 15 miles in 9 minutes and 4 seconds in a Travel Air. Paul Davis was the only pilot to first both balloons, so he received

LOOMIS TO TELL OF BOOZE PARTY

Washington Grand Jury Plans To Hear More About Liquor Drinking at Capital.

Washington, November 10.—(AP)—The question of liquor drinking in the national capital in and out of official life and the amount required to appease the appetites of Washington residents or sojourners will face the District of Columbia grand jury tomorrow when it resumes consideration of charges first made on the floor of the senate by Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa.

Edward E. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley railroad, named by Senator Brookhart as having partaken of some "alcoholic stuff" at the celebrated "Wall Street booze party" given for a group of republican senators, has agreed to testify. Frank S. Hight, manager of the Willard hotel, where the party was given nearly three years ago, and W. W. Liggitt, a contributor to the magazine Plain Talk, are among those invited to appear. Liggitt has estimated that 32,000 gallons of hard liquor per week is consumed in Washington, and District Attorney Leo A. Rover wants the grand jury informed of the situation in detail.

Senator Brookhart gave his story to the grand jury last week. He was one of those invited to the party at the Willard hotel, and he told the senate of "beautiful silver flasks" which were passed around the table, but Mr. Loomis was the only one he named specifically as having taken a drink. Loomis agreed to appear without being subpoenaed.

While the grand jury is going about its task of sifting the charges of law violations in the city, the enforcement authorities are busy in a series of raids which have brought arrests of many persons charged with bootlegging or gambling. Undercover agents are reported to be operating in the night clubs, and a temporary padlock order already has been issued against one.

The operations of purported bootleggers on Capitol Hill brought the arrest of one man recently near the senate office building. Police said he was carrying liquor at the time.

District Attorney Rover said that William J. Fahy, the New York broker, who sponsored the dinner at the Willard, had not been invited as yet to appear before the grand jury. The grand jury, he said, probably would determine early this week whether Fahy and W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who Senator Brookhart said attended the dinner, would be called.

Liggitt charged in a story he wrote for Plain Talk entitled "How Wet Is Washington?" 4,000 percent were engaged in liquor traffic here and that there was "plenty of drinking in high government circles; and that Capitol Hill is probably the wettest place in Washington."

Three newspaper reporters, Gorman Hendricks, Linton Burkett and Jack Nevins, Jr., are serving 45 days each in jail for contempt of court for refusing to give the grand jury requested information regarding a series of signatures on liquor conditions they wrote for the Washington Times.

Berlin, November 10.—(AP)—A Telegram from London today from Moscow, Lithuania, said that the resignation of Georges Tchitcherine as foreign minister of the soviet union had been accepted by the political bureau of the communist party because of his poor health. He will continue to direct the care at Wiesbaden.

Stabs Young Woman to Death as She Returns From Date; Pleads No Recollection.

Austin, Texas, November 10.—(AP)—Judge John W. Brady, 59, Austin attorney and formerly a member of the third court of civil appeals, was held in the county jail on a murder charge today after Miss Leahia Highsmith, 28, stenographer for the supreme commission of appeals, died of stab wounds, one of which penetrated her heart.

A preliminary hearing for Judge Brady has been set for tomorrow in the court of Justice of the Peace F. R. Tannhill.

Miss Highsmith was cut with a knife soon after she alighted from an automobile in front of her apartment late last night. The knife was described by Sheriff Coley White as "at least 12 inches long."

Sheriff White said that Frank Graham, Jr., employed in a local music store, was the only eye-witness to the cutting. The knife was wrested from Judge Brady by F. R. McNaughton, who came from the apartment house, the sheriff said. Brady sustained a cut on one of his fingers.

Miss Highsmith never spoke after she was wounded and had not regained consciousness when she died an hour later in a hospital. She had three knife wounds on her body.

Sam Dickens, Brady's attorney, appeared to the judge's friends to withhold judgment in the case until all the facts were available.

Dickens said that Judge Brady had no knowledge of the tragedy nor of events immediately preceding it and was shocked when apprized of the homicide and that he had been charged with murder. The attorney said that Brady had attended the Texas-Baylor football game and later had been drinking with friends.

Has No Recollection. Dickens said that the only recollection Judge Brady had of the events that night was that he had had "an encounter with a number of people somewhere."

During the day Dr. Joe Wooten and Goodall Wooten visited Judge Brady in his cell.

McNaughton, who was the first to reach Judge Brady after the stabbing, said he had come downstairs to answer the telephone and heard Judge Brady speak to Miss Highsmith as she came through the door.

They stood on the porch and talked just like any other man and woman quarrelling," McNaughton said. "When I heard a scream I ran out to the sidewalk. Judge Brady did not say anything when I took the knife from him."

Wife Visits Jail. Brady formerly was county attorney of Travis county, having served in that capacity when the state of Texas recovered approximately $3,000,000 from the Waters Pierce Oil Corporation, representing penalties for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws. He had also served as an assistant attorney-general. He received his degree from the University of Texas in 1906.

Mrs. Brady visited her husband in jail soon after he was arrested.

BANDITS WRECK PACIFIC EXPRESS

Two Men Loosen Rail and Go Through Coaches Robbing Passengers; One Injured.

Los Angeles, November 10.—(AP)—The West Coast Limited, Southern Pacific passenger train, was wrecked two miles west of Saugus, Calif., tonight by robbers who entered four coaches and held up the passengers.

The wreck apparently was caused by a loosened rail or one which had been removed. The engine, baggage car and smoker overturned. Engineer Ball was the only person hurt. He was believed scalded fatally.

The long train jarred to an abrupt stop, passengers said, and several men of the train jumped into the coaches and methodically held up every one in the cars.

Among those who lost their valuables were H. C. Pearson, district passenger agent of the company.

In the confusion authorities could not learn how much the robbers had obtained.

Poses of deputy sheriffs and armed citizens were organized and a search of the countryside began.

The victims disagreed as to the number of the men in the band.

The desperadoes apparently had planned their robbery carefully, for passengers said it was only an instant after the train ground to a stop that the robbers entered the cars and lined them up at the point of guns.

Reports here said 20 persons were held up. There were but two robbers, one of them searching the victims while the other held them at bay with a revolver.

'ONE ORDE' WINS PRISON RELEASE

Rouzer Girl Drops Out of Sight Immediately; Will Open Business Shop in New Orleans.

New Orleans, November 10.—(AP)—Gloria Rouzer, the 21-year-old New York girl who has been widely heralded as "Ione Orde" of the Jack Kraft murder mystery, was released from the Pointe a La Hache jail today after signing a transcript of her testimony at the arraignment of John McGouldrick, steamship officer, indicted for murder.

She and her mother, a former society matron, left the Rustic River village immediately in an automobile with natives giving them a warm send-off. They came to New Orleans and disappeared.

The girl's counsel said they were out of the state, seeking a respite from publicity, but would return within a few days and make preparations to open a business shop in New Orleans.

Miss Dorothy Brooks, New York attorney, brought here by Mrs. Rouzer to defend her daughter, said today there was nothing new in the case.

Breach Widens in Senate Between Regulars and Progressives Over Senator Moses' Speech.

Washington, November 10.—(AP)—Political Washington was cogitating today over rumblings from the camp of the western republican independents in the senate that their warfare against the administration republicans on tariff and farm relief may be carried into the forthcoming congressional elections, if not into the 1932 presidential campaign.

The widening breach in the senate republican ranks was disclosed to public view this week as the party regulars and independents aired their views after Chairman Moses of the republican senatorial campaign committee referred to the latter as the "sons of the wild jackass."

Scorning the characterization with apparent indifference, the western independents who have thrown their balance of power in the senate with the democrats in fighting the Hoover farm relief and tariff programs, gave notice they would urge an independent campaign in the next congressional election.

Senators Borah, of Idaho, and Norris, of Nebraska, the leader of the independent bloc, both announced they did not care for the assistance of the regular republican senatorial campaign committee in their contests for re-election next year.

Senator Norbeck, of South Dakota, disclosed he had declined to serve on the committee to spread the slightest information in the hands of the campaign forces.

While the western independents are not speaking for publication of their plans for the next congressional campaign, it is known that some of the party regulars in some of the mid-western states in the event candidates come out against them.

As for the 1932 presidential campaign, Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, and fighting the farm relief program of President Hoover in the senate, called upon the "progressives" to prepare a candidate for president.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the party leaders. As for the latter, it is the feeling of most of the party members that Senator Moses' activities in the political world have nothing to do with his duties as presiding officer of the senate.

Meanwhile, the republicans busy quarrelling. Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, the chairman of the democratic national congressional committee, issued a statement through the democratic national committee today declaring that last week's election results in Virginia and Kentucky "make it certain that we will get back every southern congressional district we lost in 1922."

Predicting the democrats would regain 10 southern districts and 11 seats in the house, Byrns said that the east and middle west, Representative Byrns said this would leave the democrats in the house only 23 shy of a majority in that chamber next year.

He said other democratic gains would be made in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and in New England, sufficient to give a democratic house.

Mr. Byrns said the economic situation following the stock market reaction would work against the party since.

Particularly are the farmers resentful, because for nearly 10 years now the republicans have put them off with promises, none of which has been kept.

"The farm situation has grown steadily worse, and the farmers aren't likely to be in a mood to again take seriously the promises of a party whose pledges long and bitter experiences have shown to be of no value."

CHILDREN USED IN BLACKMAIL PLOT

Woman Denies Causing Death of Boy and Pleads Ignorance of Fate of Four Others.

Camden, N. J., November 10.—(AP)—Gladys May Parks, sought by the police for a week, tonight was in the Camden county jail charged with the killing of one child and burying it in quick time and suspected of having slain another, the body of whom she admits also having hidden.

The victims were Dorothy Rogers, 4, and her brother, Timothy, 2, the children of Allen Rogers, an insurance agent, of Woodbury, N. J. Rogers' wife died about a year ago, leaving six children, and Gladys May Parks, cousin of Mrs. Rogers, asked Rogers to let her raise two of the children.

Rogers agreed, one of the woman's stipulations being that he was not to visit the children. For that reason he had not seen them since last summer and had not suspected anything wrong until the skeleton of a little girl was found at National park, near here, on November 2.

Surrenders Voluntarily. The skeleton was discovered by two 11-year-old girls in the tall weeds while they were on their way to church. Some of the bones were wrapped in a sheet with a Camden laundry mark and when Rogers saw this in the newspapers he remembered the Parks woman was a former employee of the laundry and reported to the police that he had turned over his children to the woman whom he could not find.

The prisoner is about 35 years old. She walked into the Newark, N. J., police headquarters early today and said she understood police were looking for her. With her was Anthony Baker, her reputed husband. The latter was brought to Camden with the woman and held as a material witness.

Briefly Gladys Parks says the little girl's death was accidental. She said she beat her because of a childish indiscretion which Dorothy blamed on her little brother. She left the girl lying on the floor and went upstairs in their Camden home and when she came down again she found the child dead. She buried the body in the cellar.

Body of Boy Found. Two days later, the woman said, the boy fell downstairs and was killed. She also hid his body in the cellar and three weeks later buried both in quick time at isolated spots.

Subjected to severe questioning, Miss Parks stoutly denied she had dismembered either body before burying it. The bones of the girl were scattered when found.

State police reported the head was found some distance from the rest of the body.

The boy's body was found only today by state troopers in a wooded area in Absecon.

Part of the torso was first discovered by the troopers lying in the scrub oaks not more than 10 feet from the sidewalk, within a stone's throw of several houses.

Continuing their search they came upon the skull about 15 feet away. The bones of the child's chest and arms were partly covered by leaves and twigs and were entirely segregated.

May Have Slain Many. Camden detectives announced tonight that the woman had confessed that she had used the children in a blackmail scheme and that they suspected her of having slain four other small children.

The woman was calm during her hearings before Police Judge Garfield.

LAVARRE HEARINGS SCHEDULED TODAY

Publisher Faces Charges Developing From Hall-LaVare Newspaper Suit.

Macon, Ga., November 10.—(AP)—Two hearings for William LaVare, on developments arising from the recent Hall-LaVare newspaper suit, are on the docket for federal court here tomorrow.

In the first hearing, LaVare, associate of Harold Hall in the purchase of four Georgia and South Carolina newspapers, will be asked to render to Pope S. Brock, special master, an accounting of funds in excess of $875,000, which Hall charges LaVare received during their negotiations with the International Paper & Power Company in connection with the newspaper purchase. The papers involved are the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle, the Columbia (S. C.) Record, and the Spartanburg (S. C.) Herald and Journal.

In the other hearing, set for the afternoon, LaVare has been ordered to show cause before Federal Judge Bascom S. Deaver why he has not complied with an order of J. T. Webb, Jr., court commissioner, to turn over to him stock in the papers pending settlement of litigation. Stock in three of the papers is held under an attachment issued in the South Carolina courts, and a recent rule brought by Webb charged that LaVare had refused to dismiss the attachment. At a previous hearing LaVare said uncertainty as to his legal right to take such action had caused the delay in complying with the commissioner's request.

Webb was appointed to hold the stock after a ruling by Judge Deaver that Hall was an equal partner with LaVare in the newspaper deal.

STATE COUNTY OFFICERS INVESTIGATE LYNCHING

Negro's Body Is Dragged Through City Streets Bul-let Ridden by Mob.

Quincy, Fla., November 10.—(AP)—County and state officials began an investigation today into the lynching here last night of Will Larkins, negro, charged with criminal attack, by a mob of between 35 and 40 masked men.

Less than twelve hours after he had been indicted by a special grand jury and special term of court had been called for his trial, Larkins' body, bullet riddled, was dragged through the streets of Quincy, tied to the rear of an automobile. Later it was burned. The shooting of the negro and the burning of the body took place at the scene of the attack, about a mile from here just off the Midway highway.

The negro was forcibly taken from Sheriff Gregory at the point of shotgun ten miles east of Madison, at 7 o'clock last night. The sheriff was taking Larkins to the Duval county jail, at Jacksonville, under orders of Governor Doyle Carlton, after the negro had previously been placed in the Madison jail for safekeeping following earlier mob threats.

According to the sheriff, he and his deputies stopped when the masked mob appeared before them on the highway, thinking that an automobile accident had occurred. As they halted, an unidentified masked man pointed a shotgun at the officer and demanded the negro, explaining that there would be no trouble if Larkins was turned over to the mob.

Gregory said he told the man that he would not give up the negro. Then another man pointed his gun at him and repeated the demand for the negro. While they argued, Gregory said, other members of the mob seized Larkins and carried him away.

The sheriff said he did not recognize any members of the band.

Two hours after the negro was taken from the sheriff, he was carried back to the scene of the crime, and there, Gregory said, was literally shot to pieces. The dragging through the streets and the returning of the body to the crime scene for burning soon followed.

The girl, about 12 years old, was attacked last Friday as she was going home from school. Larkins is alleged to have been talking with a negro woman on the highway when she passed. He followed the child into the woods and attacked her, the sheriff declared.

Officers said the girl identified Larkins as her assailant.

That night, a crowd began to gather in front of the jail shortly after Larkins had been arrested. The sheriff, fearing violence, took the negro to Tallahassee for safe keeping. The next day the present mob of Larkins in the capital jail became known and Sheriff Frank Stoutamire of Leon county, also fearing trouble, had the negro taken to the Madison county jail.

The transfer to the Duval county jail was attempted then.

Readers Have Been Positively Warned to Lose No Time.

At last the Dictionary distribution is to be discontinued—and in very short time. The exact date has not yet been decided upon, but it will be announced in a few days.

In the meantime, all readers who have not yet taken advantage of this offer should "hurry their stumps," as the old timers used to say, and present their Dictionary coupons before this educational campaign is brought to a close.

There's not a better Dictionary of the kind published—that's sure. Call and look it over—which is the way to prove this statement. Call and see the book. Only three coupons and the small distribution expense are required.—(adv.)

2 Escaped Girls Soon Captured; Again in Cells

A daring escape by two young women from the matron's ward at police headquarters went for naught late Saturday night. The girls were back in their cells less than three hours after they had effected their freedom. And all because they tarried to celebrate.

The girls, both of whom admit being 16 years old, are Mary Hessler and Barbara Mersha, the former lately of LaGrange and the other from Kalamazoo, Mich.

Mrs. J. C. Davis, policewoman, had things fixed to transfer the girls to the detention home today when they decided to flee. The pair broke out a pane from their cell window and hurled their coats three floors to the courtyard below. Then they swung onto a drain pipe and down they slid. An alarm was sounded and call officers ran to the courtyard, finding the coats but no girls.

Alert Patrolman E. L. Gurley was patrolling his beat shortly after 3 o'clock Sunday morning when he encountered two girls seemingly drunk and disorderly, according to the entries on the police blotter. The patrolman began to ask questions the girls couldn't answer. So down to head-

SAVANNAH TRADE BODY WILL MEET THURSDAY NIGHT

Savannah, Ga., November 10.—(AP) The reunited Chamber of Commerce, the new name chosen for the amalgamation of the Savannah Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, and Junior Chamber of Commerce, will hold a membership meeting Thursday evening at which 1,000 are expected, climax to the preparation for the "Forward Movement" week of the trade body.

The plan of the Chamber of Commerce is to raise an annual budget of $100,000 for three years to further civic efforts in behalf of Savannah. This budget contemplates boosting the industrial and port development of Savannah, publicity, highway, convention and tourist, and traffic bureau work. Colonel A. R. Lawton is general chairman of the movement.

MANY CUBAN BUSINESS MEN EXPECTED HERE

Leaders To Accompany Havana Athletic Teams on Forthcoming Visit.

Over 250 Cuban business leaders probably will accompany the Havana athletic teams which will play the cadets of Georgia Military academy in December, in the estimation of S. H. Tolson, who left Atlanta Sunday night for Havana in company with Luis F. Kohly. The two, who are outstanding citizens of Havana, remained in Atlanta over the weekend to confer with Colonel J. C. Woodward, president of G. M. A., and others with further reference to arrangements for welcoming and entertaining the large delegation from the island republic.

Following an impressive dress parade of the G. M. A. cadets, which was staged for the benefit of the Cuban visitors, and the formal dedication of the Robert W. Woodruff band, a meeting of members of the alumni association was held to discuss plans for the sale of 10,000 tickets for the football and basketball games which will be held here. A general meeting of the association is to be held Friday noon in the private dining room at Davison-Paxon Company, and all members are requested to be present.

A handsome souvenir program, commemorating the visit of the Cubans, will be published in advance of their arrival and was announced. Arrangements were made with Mr. Tolson to distribute a large number of copies in Cuba to members of the Cuban tourist commission, the Havana Yacht Club, the Country Club of Havana, the Vedado Tennis Club, the American Chamber of Commerce in Cuba, government officials and others in an effort to develop interest in the forthcoming good-will tour.

Atlanta will send a special committee to Havana Tuesday to present in person invitations from the governor of Georgia, the mayor of Atlanta, the Atlanta press, the Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta Foreign Trade Club, the president of Atlanta's universities, and others, to the president of Cuba, the governor of the Province of Havana, the mayor of Havana and others. General Homer C. Parker, state adjutant general, left early Sunday morning for Havana, where he will be joined Thursday by the other committee members from Atlanta.

Little Symphony At Emory Gives Pleasing Concert

The solo work of George Rogers, vocalist, and Sam Seitz, Atlanta violinist, featured the 30th Sunday afternoon concert of Emory's "Little Symphony" in the university auditorium Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, director, was eminently successful in securing real rhythm and tone effects in this initial concert of the season. Both the string and the wind instrument sections worked together to produce a pleasing as well as finished program of music.

In the playing of Schubert's "Symphony in B Minor" (Unfinished), the orchestra gave to the audience outstanding symphonic effects. "Pomp and Circumstance" (Elgar), the closing number, was possibly the best executed of the group of orchestral numbers, opening with "War March of the Priests," from "Athaliah," by Mendelssohn, and including Borowski's "Adoration."

"God, My Father—Seven Last Words" by Dubois, sung by George Rogers, Glee Club star, was the outstanding success of the program. He also sang "Bondage" and "Little Mother Mine" and afterward rendered "Water Boy" (Robinson-Dewey) as an encore.

Sam Seitz played Kol Nidrei, which is based on a chant taken from the Hebrew service for the Day of Atonement, with intense feeling. The accompaniment was by Miss Aileen Stephens.

The concert Sunday was the first of a series of three or more to be given this year at Emory.

N. E. L. A. Convention Heard in Talkies At Local Theater

Employees of the Georgia Power Company yesterday afternoon filled the Paramount theater to hear the first presentation in Atlanta in movie-tone pictures of the 1929 convention of the National Electric Light Association.

The saw and heard not only the initial appearance in talking pictures of Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company and at the time of the convention president of the National Electric Light Association, but also other such notables as Mr. Curtis, vice president of the United States; Sir Kengo Mori, well-known Japanese economist; Sir Ernest Benn, noted English publisher; his excellency, Alberto Pirelli, of Milan, Italy, president of the International Chamber of Commerce; the poet, Bertin Braley; David Lawrence, president of the United States Daily, and others. And Thomas A. Edison in a picture made at his Florida home.

All of the pictures were in the form of a tribute to Mr. Edison. It probably was the most unusual presentation ever offered in Atlanta—world-famous men from many parts of the globe paying homage to the man who perfected the incandescent lamp.

The "show" began with the opening of the ceremonies in Atlantic City of Light's Golden Jubilee by Mr. Arkwright, followed by the dedication of Atlantic City's new auditorium by Vice President Curtis and the formal reception to Mr. Arkwright as president of the National Electric Light Association.

Sir Kengo Mori, of Japan, spoke through pictures made at his home in the far east. Sir Ernest Benn, famed English publisher, speaking in the garden of his summer home near London, told of the superiority of private enterprise over public ownership, saying in effect that the zeal of those advocating public ownership made up for what they lacked in brains, and that no reasonable man could argue in favor of public ownership.

Signor Pirelli characterized Edison as a man who, although born in a man who, although born in the United States, belonged to the world. Mr. Edison, seated in a chair against a background of palms at his Florida home, expressed his pleasure at what his "colleagues" had accomplished and predicted that the development of electricity was only in its beginning. The pictures are to be shown to employees of the Georgia Power Company in various parts of Georgia—Augusta, Athens, Macon, Columbus, Albany, Brunswick and other cities.

BOY OF FOURTEEN IS SHORT-CHANGED BY 'MEANEST THIEF'

To the evergrowing list of superlatives accorded members of crookdom's army, Sunday afternoon was added another "meanest thief."

After 14-year-old Robert Bennett, son of G. W. Bennett, of Innan yards, had spent the entire afternoon on the West Side making small collections for his father, a former dairy operator, he started home—with $5.55. At Peters and Walker streets he was accosted by a friendly stranger who wanted to know if the "nice looking little boy" could let him have change for a $5 bill.

Yes, Robert could and did let him have it . . . but he never received the $5 bill promised him, according to a report to Police Captain Archer J. Holcomb.

Detectives are investigating.

Historical Markings To Be Made Along Coastal Highway

Savannah, Ga., November 10.—(AP) An order has been placed by the coastal highway commission, of which Harvey Granger, of Savannah, is chairman, for 25 historical markers to be placed along the coastal highway in Georgia from Chatham county to the Florida line.

These markers will be placed at points commemorative of some historical event or site in the history of Georgia along this highway, following the plan adopted by Virginia in marking her highways.

Included in the places of interest are: Jasper Springs, where Sergeant Jasper and Newton, of the continental army, rescued American prisoners and captured British soldiers in effecting the rescues in the road to Mulberry Grove, home of General Nathaniel Greene, commander of American Revolutionary troops in the south, and also the place where Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin; the camping spot of Oglethorpe when he first landed at Savannah; Springhill redoubt, where Pulaski and Jasper fell in the siege of Savannah; Fort McAllister, on the Ogeechee river, where one of the most celebrated defenses in the Civil War took place; the lost town of Hardwick; Fort Argyle; Midway church in Liberty county; Oglethorpe Oak, at Darien; Lanier Oak, where Sidney Lanier wrote the "Marshes of Glynn"; Lyman Hall plantation and other places.

Adults, Too, Prefer "No Dosing" For Colds

Millions Adopt External Remedy Made Famous as Treatment for Children's Colds

A generation ago, when Vicks Vaporub was a wisp of an idea of treating colds without "dosing" was almost unheard of. It was the custom then to give large doses of internal medicines for colds and almost every human ailment. Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

Equally Good for Adults. Mothers of young children especially have been quick to appreciate this modern external way of treating colds, because there's nothing to swallow and, of course, nothing to upset the little ones' stomachs. Year after year more and more adults, too, have found Vicks equally good for their own colds.

Just rubbed on, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness. At the same time, the heat of the body releases medicated vapors which are breathed in direct to the inflamed air-passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

Now "26" Million! The ever-increasing demand for this better method of treating colds is shown in the figures of the familiar Vicks slogan. First announced when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly"—later raised to "21 Million"—these figures, too, have been "out-grown," as there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

Methodists Hear Social Service Achievements Of Bibb Manufacturing Co.

Marvelous Record in Bringing New Era for Industrial Workers of South Disclosed.

BY C. B. WILMER, JR., Staff Correspondent.
Macon, Ga., November 10.—(Special.)—Dawn of a "new era" in the

GORHAM SILVER

Maier & Berkele, Inc.
For Forty-Two Years the Leading Jewellers of the South
411 Peachtree St. Established 1887

industrial life of the rapidly industrializing south, brought about by the injection of the "human element" in the management of large manufacturing concerns which puts the executive and the employee on a basis of mutual understanding and co-operation; which develops "community consciousness" in mill village communities, and which helps to promote better citizenship in every respect in the families of mill workers, was described here Saturday night at a banquet given delegates to the South Georgia Methodist conference by the social service department of the Bibb Manufacturing Company.

W. D. Anderson, chief executive of the Bibb company, the largest manufacturers of cotton goods in the south and the second largest concern of its kind in the United States, presided at the informal gathering which assembled some 400 Methodist leaders. These delegates heard reports from members of mill workers' families in which were detailed accounts of the social, religious and athletic activities of one of the 11 "mill villages" of the Bibb organization. They heard Mr. Anderson declare that "We are proud of the goods we produce but we are far more proud of our workers and their families and this attitude is generally prevalent and growing daily throughout the entire southeast. Industrial leaders of the south have seen a new vision of their duty and a cotton mill employee is no longer regarded as a part of the mill machinery."

The meeting was brought to a close by unanimous passage of a resolution in which the Methodist delegates expressed their implicit confidence in the future of the industrial south and promised every co-operation in carrying forward the ideas and ideals of the social service plan. They were unanimous in agreeing that the entire program, sponsored by the company but put on by the workers themselves, was an absolute revelation.

Epochal Significance.
Frank amazement was expressed on every hand at the far-reaching results of the policy of the Bibb organization and many declared that the occasion was of epoch-making significance.

To fully understand this point of view it must be pointed out that those in attendance at this meeting had been given an intimate, first-hand description of the actual conditions in the home life of some 6,000 employees of one of the south's leading industrial concerns. Reports presented by the people themselves pictured the whole scope of "outside activities" of a "family" numbering nearly 25,000, and showed a cross section of the "mill village" which has probably never previously been brought before the public in such a light. It was the "other side" of the more generally accepted picture of the every-day existence of cotton mill workers, and one which gave an entirely new aspect to the industrial situation in this section.

Reports were presented on the activities of women's and men's clubs, showing the number of visits made in the various mill communities to sick people and newcomers, the number of bouquets and trays of food distributed; reports on boys' athletics and the Boy Scout movement; on the senior and junior girls' reserves; on the Bibb Recorder, a weekly newspaper devoted to the interests of the Bibb employees and their families; on the work of the sewing classes and cooking classes in the various villages, and reports on the Sunday schools, showing an average weekly attendance of more than 2,000. These are just some of the "outside activities" carried on by the Bibb "family" under the guidance of the company's social service department.

"Community Consciousness."
"Governor Franklin Roosevelt recently told us of the need of a feeling of 'community consciousness,'" said Mr. Anderson in commenting on the reports. "Don't you think that more than 16,000 visits to sick people and newcomers in various communities, the sending of flowers and trays of food and the work of these clubs and organizations show that this feeling is being and has been developed?"

"The rapid industrialization of the south has brought with it a host of problems," he continued, "and these are being confronted in the south like nowhere else in the country. But we do everything differently here. Perhaps it is because we have a little more sentiment. In any event, ours is the first attempt to introduce the personal element."

"You have doubtless heard the 'mill village' idea condemned for various supposed causes, but the people living in these centers are the same people who a few years ago formed the backbone of your country churches. There has been an exodus from the farms, but have these people changed in nature merely because they are enjoying better all-around living conditions?"

Balances Population.
"The advent of industries to the south has been welcomed because it has helped to balance our population. It has enabled the farmer to sell his products closer to his farm and in this way, has contributed greatly to our economic structure. More and more industries are coming and the southeast is destined to be the greatest industrial section in the country. Without the mill village, however, such development is impossible. It has been tried and has been found wanting. Our problems, therefore, will be increased, but do not be led astray by distorted pictures of mill village conditions. We are not working independently of the church but with it, and it is up to the church to get in touch with the real situation as it exists today," he concluded.

Mr. Anderson pointed out that the new trend in the south's industrial life was not by any means confined to the Bibb company and specifically stated that many other organizations were working along the same line. That the "new era," however, not only dawned but has become a definite reality for his concern was more than amply demonstrated by the Saturday night gathering.

The banquet was served in the auditorium of Mill No. 2 by the women of the three Macon "mill villages," No. 1, No. 2 and Payne City. Entertainment was provided by members of the Junior and Senior Girl Reserves. An orchestra was also on hand for the occasion.

Women's Clubs.
Mrs. B. B. Snow, reporting on the activities of the women's clubs in the Bibb company, stated that a total of 16,543 visits were made in the three Macon communities and the other Bibb mills and that 1,006 bouquets and 1,270 trays were sent to sick people and newcomers during the past fiscal year. The clubwomen raised by their plays, suppers and picture programs a total of $2,613.

Girl Reserve work, another large part of the social service program, was described by Miss Drucilla Mullis, of the Payne City group. They made a total of 7,727 visits, carried 784 bouquets, 347 trays and raised $2,028.25. Each year the girls, by meeting certain requirements, qualify for a week's camp or trip. Last summer, more than 130 girls spent a week at St. Augustine, Fla., under this arrangement.

Boy Scout, Wolf Cub and Junior Girl Reserve organizations carry on the training of the children, and athletic and other clubs for recreation and a social life in and for the various communities that are rapidly developing into the most important branch of the Bibb company work. In addition to the social activities, schools and Sunday schools are maintained or made available in each of the villages.

After a contact with these various organizations and after seeing the tangible results of their work, it is impossible not to be impressed with the feeling that everything possible is being done to improve living and working conditions for these people. The bonus plan affords a most striking example of the latter. At the end of two years employment, a worker is given a cash bonus of three per cent of his year's salary and this is increased until it reaches 12 per cent for all employees who have been with the company 10 years. In recognition of splendid service rendered during the past fiscal year, directors of the company last month voted an additional bonus of the same amount as the regular service bonus. The 10-year service list thus received 24 per cent of their salary for the year as a cash gift from the company. The distribution of this bonus since the inauguration of the plan has called for the expenditure of approximately $1,200,000.

Following is a list of the reports presented Saturday night: Women's club work, men's clubs and night schools by Mrs. B. B. Snow; athletics and Boy Scout work by Douglas Fincher; Senior Girl Reserves by Drucilla Mullis; Junior Girl Reserves by Lillian Layfield; the Bibb Recorder by Louise Kite; sewing classes by Mary Jones; cooking classes by Lena Mae Waller; Sunday schools by Mable Morrow and religious and athletic activities at Forterdale by Professor E. J. Brown.

KING EMMANUEL CELEBRATES 60TH BIRTHDAY TODAY

Rome, November 10.—(AP)—King Victor Emmanuel III, Italy's "soldier king," tomorrow celebrates his 60th birthday, and his 42,000,000 subjects celebrate with him.

Tonight the public buildings throughout the kingdom were festooned with flags, bunting and strings of electric lights. Rome's commemoration began with a review of the capital's garrison followed by parades of fascist organizations. In the late afternoon band concerts were given in the public squares, as was the case in the provincial cities.

With the lateran treaties in operation, today's advance commemoration of the anniversary was participated in by the Catholic church in Italy in imposing fashion. The prayer "for Victor, our king," in absence ever since the events of 1870 when the forces of Victor Emmanuel II occupied Rome and put an end to the pope's temporal power, was intoned aloud by the clergy.

Air Mail Aviator Sounds Warning As Garage Burns

C. E. (Slim) Thomas, Pittsboro air mail pilot running between Candler field and Jacksonville, Sunday made his debut as a member of the College Park volunteer fire department and already has qualified as a first class fireman.

Slim was flying over the borough shortly before daylight Sunday when he noticed a garage in flames. Noting his plane downward he circled over the burning building and noted that the fire department was not in attendance.

Sensing that he was the discoverer of the blaze, Slim roared back and forth over the home of H. W. Powers, which was directly in front of the garage and in which he surprised lived the owner of the burning building.

One, twice, three times Slim, race

ing his motor at top speed and with a roar that almost woke up the neighborhood, swept over the Powers home. After his third effort, Mr. Powers came running into his backyard in dressing gown and pajamas to note that his garage was almost razed. He summoned the College Park fire department which succeeded in extinguishing the flames in time to save one of two autos stored in the building. The loss was estimated at $1,200.

What NATURAL GAS Will Mean to ATLANTA

Industrial Opportunities—because it provides a practical fuel for all applications of heat in industry—on account of its high heat content—its uniformity of temperature control—the fact that it fuels itself (no storage room or handling)—its actual and general economies.

Cleaner and Easily Operated Homes—because it eliminates soot, grime, and does not leave ashes—high heat content makes it practical for house heating—no labor, fuels itself—no money tied up in season's fuel supply, paid for after using—small cost for all heat purposes—cooking, water-heating, house-heating and refrigeration—even temperature no matter how hot or cold the weather.

Attractive Stores—because of greater customer comfort and reduced soilage of stocks—less fuel and no fueling expense.

A Cleaner—More Modern—and Greater Atlanta—and an important factor in the community's further progress—(Seventy-five per cent of all gas used in the United States is NATURAL GAS—there's a real reason.)

NATURAL GAS which will be brought to Atlanta contains 995 heat units to every cubic foot as compared with the 575 heat units in the same amount of artificial gas. This means that 578 cubic feet of natural gas will provide the same amount of heat that 1,000 cubic feet of artificial gas gives.

The Constitution's Weekly Business Review

EDITED BY M. D. GLEASON

There is hardly a need or a want that cannot be filled in Atlanta's stores and factories.

College Professor Tells Merits of Weather Strips

H. Vanderwoort Walsh, assistant professor of architecture of the Columbia university, writing in the November issue of Good Housekeeping about the advantages of weather strips, says in part:

"Did you ever realize, as you sat by the average window—one about three feet wide and six feet high—that on a windy day in winter as much cold air leaked through it as a square hole, four by four inches, would admit? With a wind blowing at forty miles an hour, about 8,100 cubic feet of icy air filters through the cracks between the sash and the frame of the window, in one hour. This means that a large room fifteen feet wide by thirty feet long and nine feet high would be completely filled with cold air, leaking through one such window, in half an hour, if the radiator was turned off.

Wind Causes Difference

"That is the reason why a house is often cooler on a moderately cool day with a high wind, than a very cold but calm day. Fortunately for us, the coldest days are usually the quietest, and often the heaviest winds are accompanied by snow which plugs up the cracks in the north, but in the south the winds and blowing rains are not hampered in this way and are allowed to enter the rooms. An enormous amount of fuel is burned every winter in homes just to heat the cold air which leaks in at the doors and windows. Of course, the cold air gets in on one side of the house, the warm air escapes on the opposite, and this means a definite loss of heat. When the window area is about fifteen per cent of the wall area, nearly thirty-three per cent of all the heat needed to keep the house warm is required to offset the chilling effect of the leakage through the window cracks. In other words, if you could seal up your windows tight, your fuel bills would decrease one-third. This is advocated by some engineers, but let us hope the day of homes equipped with such prison-like windows is far distant.

"However, it is possible to reduce this heat loss a great deal by using weather-strips on the windows and doors. A well-designed type may reduce the loss of heat by leakage as much as four-fifths, so that about 25 per cent of the annual fuel bill may be saved.

Leaks Around Windows

Take, for example, the ordinary wooden window, with sash that slide up and down, known as the double-hung window. Without weather strips when the wind blows on an average of 15 miles an hour every linear foot of crack allows 157 cubic feet of air to leak through in an hour. This is a conservative estimate based upon a crack of one-sixteenth of an inch between sash and frame. In most houses the crack grows larger than this as the wood seasons and shrinks. Often a house may be warm the first winter but develops drafts and chilly spots the following one, because all the cracks between the sash and the window and window frames and door and door frames, and no cold air is then the liquidation of stocks has been terminated, bankers and bond experts believe that the forward movement of the market will be resumed with considerable vigor. The use of credit for speculative purposes has been sharply curtailed, as the decline of one and three-quarters billions in brokers' loans in the last fortnight attests, and money is nearing levels which will make bond buying attractive to banks. Already there has been a marked increase in the loans from corporations which placed large sums in the call money market during the months of high interest rates, but which find the current figures not so alluring.

Quite aside from the demand that normally follows easing money, the heavy losses suffered by investors in stocks have turned attention to bonds as a more stable refuge for funds. In times of declining prices in equity issues individuals who had participated in a rising stock market are back to fixed-income obligations, and the tendency in this direction, which reached sizeable proportions during the October bond rally, is expected to continue.

New financing is small. Last week's total of bond offerings was only $16,869,000, of which all but $1,000,000 was in the municipal classification. The total a week ago was $2,292,500, the lowest of the year, whereas in the corresponding week of 1928, the amount was $75,765,000. Stabilization of the security markets and recovery from the nervousness that accompanies such drastic declines have just been witnessed would undoubtedly result in the appearance of numerous new loans.

Observers are watching with some interest the nature of such financing. During the months of the bull market in shares virtually every major bond issue by a domestic corporation carried a stock privilege feature to "sweeten" it for the public taste, but in view of the recent developments it would not be surprising if forthcoming floatations were along straight investment lines.

Net sales of Spierel, May, Stern company, national mail order house, for the first ten months of the year, were $19,633,493 as compared to $18,633,493, an increase of 22 per cent. October sales were $2,068,000, as compared to $2,447,336, in October, 1928.

The Business Barometer

BY THEODORE H. PRICE
Editor, Commerce and Finance, New York.

"Will American trade be hurt by the collapse in the stock market?" is a question that is being asked everywhere in Europe as well as in America. The universal interest in the answer is explained by the fact that the United States has become the world's chief money-lender, and that enterprise everywhere is more or less dependent upon the size of our loanable surplus.

Those who have the public ear are always justified in making a reasonably optimistic presentation of the facts, but it is a question of how far they ought to go in prophesying or proclaiming calamity even though it may seem to be inescapable. Therefore it might be well to take the pessimistic predictions that are now to be heard on every side with a great deal of salt.

It is true that stocks have declined and that a great many people feel poorer in consequence, but taken in its entirety the nation is just as well off as it was before the sharp drop in the stock market, and the only people who have sustained any real losses are those who have sold their stocks out for one reason or another. The losses that these sellers have been compelled to accept do not, however, impair the intrinsic value of the securities that they have sold, and although they may not feel very rich the man who owns a house, a share of stock, or an oil well, is just as well off today as he was six months ago, even though the market value of the thing owned may have been cut in half. Therefore, any depression in trade that may occur following the decline in stocks will be sequential rather than consequential in character.

Economy May Come.
In the past such movements have gone very far. America is too content to feel the necessity for economy, and after our people have practiced thrift for a few months, they generally revert to the habit of spending lavishly, which is a national characteristic.

Most statistics are at least a month behind the facts, and aside from the cuts in the prices of radios and Ford automobiles the only affirmative evidence of lessened demand that can be cited is the decline in most staple commodities that has been registered during the last week or ten days.

Cotton is lower. The uncertainties of the stock market and an enlargement of crop estimates are responsible for the drop. Grain has also declined as some of the wheat and corn are supposed to have been heavily interested in the stock market. Cotton has declined almost to the point where the farm board will let upon it to the co-operatives, and in some markets wheat has actually been below that price. Therefore the chairman of the farm board has urged that the farmers stand against the sale of these commodities at present levels.

Rubber is likewise lower upon accounts of statistical evidence that production is exceeding last year's output and all earlier estimates. Coffee has been very unsteady at a sharp decline upon cables from Rio and Santos from which it is inferred that the "defense of coffee" is gradually disintegrating.

The unanimity with which the semi-precious commodities have declined would perhaps be more significant if they reflected an overbought condition in any quarter, but stocks are not excessive. Retailers, jobbers and manufacturers are well sold up, and distributors show no anxiety to get rid of goods. Industrial production is a little lower, particularly in automobiles and steel, but the U. S. Steel Corporation reports that its unfilled orders increased in October for the second month in succession, and although no immediate upturn in either industry is likely general conditions cannot be as unfavorable as some think.

MATTRESS MAKING BUSINESS IS GOOD NEARLY ALL YEAR

It is strange what a few years' difference makes in some lines of industry. Take the mattress renovating business. A few years ago the housewife seemed to think the spring of the year was the only time to have old mattresses made over. This meant the mattress men were rushed to death for a few weeks and then did very little for the balance of the year.

Now that the difference of sleeping on a soft mattress from sleeping on a hard one is so well known by most everybody, the housewife of today does not see any reason of looking at the calendar to see if it is the time to have the old or soiled mattress made over. Every day is mattress renovating day these days, and most everybody knows that an old lumpy or flattened-out mattress that prevents one from obtaining restful sleep will never get better, but rather worse as the months go by, so that the quicker it is made over the sooner health-giving restful sleep may be enjoyed.

The Superior Mattress Company at 835 Bankhead avenue, N. W., presents at this time the evidence of the change in the seasons in mattress renovating. In November the firm adds extra men and women to the organization to keep up with the rush orders for homes, boarding houses, hotels and public institutions.

The president of this firm, H. R. Simon, attributed this changing of a dull season of the year into a busy one in the mattress renovating business to growing intelligence of the housewives and their thoughtfulness in looking out more for the night comfort of their families and guests.

Mr. Simon further states: "No matter how elegant a bedroom may be or how sumptuously it may be furnished, if the mattress on the bed is hard and uncomfortable, the occupant of the room doesn't get a good night's sleep as the housewife or hostess hoped they would."

The Superior Mattress Company has been in business for many years and it has a good organization of expert workmen. No matter how old or soiled a mattress may be, when the old cotton has been run through the machines and made clean again and then put in a new standard or fancy covering, it returns a soft, comfortable mattress. This firm is especially equipped to do quick work and can give one-day service when needed.

SHOES.

Shoe companies are interested in the effect recent developments in the stock market—with widespread loss of paper profits and in many cases actual losses—will have on demand for shoe novelties.

Tried and proven types are likely to profit at the expense of a number of styles somewhat less serviceable though doubtless fascinating to the feminine taste. We do not expect to see women putting copper tips on their shoes, but certainly more quality will be paid to wearing qualities.

Belting markets are affected by the decline in industrial activity. Production of this grade of leather has been running at record levels by a wide margin. Stocks, however, have not accumulated, although there is now a

Meantime a policy of reasonable circumspection should be followed by merchants and manufacturers. It will be at least two months before the smoke and dust of the recent debacle have disappeared so that we can see with any degree of clearness, and until then it might be well to keep the topsails reefed, unless we get into a calm that makes it necessary for us to avail ourselves of every breeze that blows. Such a calm seems improbable. Business in America has become an enormous force. Any serious diminution in its volume seems to be unlikely, and the distress that the recent panic has caused will be forgotten just as soon as hope again takes possession of this hopeful people.

From abroad the news is in the main encouraging. In undertaking to nationalize the coal mines of Great Britain, the MacDonald ministry is attempting an experiment that will be watched with profound interest all over the world. If it is successful its effect, and the economic reformations that it will compel, will be felt by generations that are yet unborn, and it may prove to be the cornerstone of a new industrial philosophy concerning which all conservatives and many radicals are still doubtful.

Modern Cafe Proves Success In Old Rex Soft Drink Parlor

Visitors to Atlanta this season marvel at the transformation of the old Rex soft drink parlor in the Grand Theater building into a very modern up-to-date restaurant with a large staff of girls busy waiting on the hundreds of men and women who eat there daily.

When the time came last winter to re-equip the Rex, due to a small fire there, R. L. York, the proprietor, decided that his new Rex would be one of the most up-to-date modern lunch-rooms where the largest assortment of the best foods the markets afford could be had.

After looking around for a capable chef to supervise the culinary department, he decided on Billy Beckmann, who has had more than 17 years' experience in serving southern home-cooked foods to hundreds of people daily.

Mr. York gave Mr. Beckmann authority to get an efficient organization of experts in their line. He began with a staff of six, and it now takes nearly a score of hustling men and girls to wait on the ever-increasing trade.

The Rex at this time is featuring a chicken dinner and steak supper. Mr. Beckmann is stressing the fact that chickens he buys to serve are freshly larger quantity in process of tanning than a year ago.

Hide markets are weak. Tariff action seems further away than ever. A dwindling of orders for nearly all grades of leather suggests price shading unless trade picks up shortly.

The latest figures available show that in September American shoe factories—about 95 per cent of the industry—produced 34,500,000 pairs of boots and shoes, which compares with 31,000,000 in the corresponding month a year ago and 34,000,000 in September, 1927. The average output per working day, 1,592,000 pairs, is the highest September figure on record, but the increase over the August rate was smaller than usual. Total third quarter production was 8 per cent larger than that in the third quarter of 1928.

While stocks are moderate, it is evident that manufacturers and dealers have anticipated a good volume of business this winter in their third quarter operations. Current reports are that orders for shoes are not so plentiful as they were. Some manufacturers are already turning to 1930 numbers. In all likelihood samples for the spring season will stress staple lines rather than luxury types.

Cocoa futures dropped to new low levels for 1929 during the past week on the New York cocoa exchange and present prices are at about the same levels as before the war.

Debutante Sextet To Help on 'Poppy Day'

Reading from left to right the above photograph presents Misses Elsie Prater, Sarah Law, Frances Barnett, Katherine Howell, Adair McCarley and Frances Spalding, members of the Debutante Club of 1929-30, who will take part in "Poppy Day," sponsored by the American Legion auxiliary Tuesday, November 12. This is an annual event set apart to help disabled veterans of the World War. Mrs. Arthur Hazzard is chairman of this patriotic movement, and is being assisted by a committee of enthusiastic workers.

Miss Winston and Miss Norcross Make Debut Friday, November 22

Mrs. William Roderick Sample and Mrs. Kittie Holt Drewry have issued invitations to a reception honoring Miss Adeline Winston and Miss Catharine Norcross, two of the most attractive members of the debutante set, at the Court of St. James, Friday, November 22, at the Piedmont Driving Club, from 5 until 7 o'clock. Miss Winston is an only daughter of Mr. Sample, and Mrs. Drewry, maternal aunt of Miss Norcross, arrives this week from Raleigh, N. C., to visit her charming niece at her home on Peachtree road until after this auspicious occasion.

These lovely debs have been intimate friends ever since their childhood days, having attended Washington seminary together, graduating in the same class in June, 1927. Under the chaperonage of Miss Frances

Miss Brown Weds James Cox at Trinity Church

The marriage of Miss Winnie Davis Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Brown, of Lake City, S. C., to James Cox, of Atlanta, was solemnized at 6:45 o'clock Sunday evening in the Sunday school room of Trinity Methodist church, the Rev. Homer Thompson, pastor, officiating in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends.

The improvised altar, before which the ceremony was performed, was banked with palms, foliage plants and ferns, against which a tall floor basket of large white chrysanthemums stood in bold relief. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Josephine Bridwell, soloist, to the accompaniment of the Epworth League orchestra, sang, "I Love You Truly," and other selections.

The bride wore a becoming model of brown chiffon trimmed with touches of velvet which were introduced from the graceful circular skirt, effectively draped, to the blouse in modish finger tip effect. Her hair was a close fitting model of brown felt offset with trimmings of gold. She wore a shoulder bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley.

A reception was held afterward in the dining room of the Sunday school. Chrysanthemums were effectively used in decoration. Mrs. Jack Hinshaw, assisted in entertaining, Miss Jerry Harris kept the bride's book.

The young couple left for a wedding trip to Florida. They will make their home upon their return at 92 Edison avenue, Peachtree hills. Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were: David Brown, of Lake City, S. C.; Miss Maybelle Rembert, of Kingstree, S. C., and F. W. Felkel, of Anderson, S. C.

PETER TRAVELS ON THREE LEGS.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

What we can do we never know. Until our best we're forced to show.—Peter Rabbit.

Of one thing Peter Rabbit was certain, and that was that the sooner he got away from that bramble tangle the better. He knew now that Reddy Fox knew where he was and he suspected that Reddy Fox also knew that he had been hurt. So he felt sure that Reddy would return, in the hope of catching him outside that bramble tangle. Hardly was Reddy and Mrs. Reddy out of sight on their way home when Peter left his hiding place and made his way to another bramble tangle. There he rested a while, then once more moved from one bramble tangle to another, hopping along on three legs and all the time keeping the sharpest watch for danger.

Now, as he hopped along he hopped slowly. He held that left forefoot off the ground. "My goodness," thought Peter, "if ever I should have to run for my life, I wouldn't have any chance at all on three legs! No, I wouldn't have any chance at all on three legs. Why, anybody could catch me. However shall I get over to the dear Old Briar-patch? If any of my enemies should discover me crossing the Green Meadows to the dear Old Briar-patch I wouldn't have a chance!"

At last Peter reached the edge of the Old Pasture. He had stopped to eat a little, although he didn't have much appetite. That bramble tangle was a very good bramble tangle. It was a big one and it was a thick one. In it Peter felt quite safe. He could stay there some time if he had to, for there was enough to eat in there, such as it was. "I'll stay here until this leg is well," thought Peter. So he made himself as comfortable as he could and prepared to stay as long as necessary.

There was one thing, however, that Peter hadn't considered. From the edge of the bramble tangle he could look across the Green Meadows to the dear Old Briar-patch. Just looking made him homesick. Yes, sir, it did so. The more he looked the more homesick he grew. There is no place like home when one is feeling bad, and Peter Rabbit was feeling bad. He stood it just as long as he could. Then, just at daylight the next morning, Peter decided that he couldn't wait any longer. He looked in every direction to see that the way was clear. He couldn't see far, for it was still dusk. He knew that if he waited until full daylight it would be more dangerous than it was now. So Peter decided to venture.

He hopped out from the bramble tangle and started across the Green Meadows. He went on three legs. Once he tried putting that hurt foot down, but he didn't try it again. That leg was too sore and lame to use. So he limped along and hoped with all his might that he would not be seen by any of his enemies.

Peter was halfway to the dear Old Briar-patch when he heard a sound that made him forget all about how bad he felt. It was a scream. It was the scream of a Hawk. Peter didn't even look to see where that Hawk might be. He knows all about the wonderful eyesight of all members of the Hawk family and he knew that if that Hawk had not already seen him, it would be only a short time before those wonderful eyes did find him. So Peter started for the dear Old Briar-patch, and to see him go you would never have guessed that only a moment before he had been limping along. It was lucky that Peter started when he did. The sharp eyes of that Hawk did see Peter, and the big bird shot down after him. Peter, rolling his eyes back, saw the Hawk coming, and he ran faster than ever. As he started in the dear Old Briar-patch there was a hiss of air through stout wing feathers close behind him and with a scream of disappointment the Hawk went on its way. Then, and not until then, did Peter realize that he had been running almost as fast on three legs as he could have using all four.

The sharp eyes of that Hawk did see Peter and the big bird shot down after him.

BUCKET BRIGADE SAVES FLORIDA PACKING HOUSES

Tarpon Springs, Fla., November 10.

(AP)—Fire fighters from Tarpon Springs and Dunedin took part in an old-fashioned bucket brigade last night at Palm Harbor and saved two citrus packing houses from flames which destroyed three other buildings.

The fire originated in a building of the Hub Supply Company and soon spread to two others. Fire engines from here and Dunedin speeded to Palm Harbor, five miles to the south, but when they got there their modern apparatus was useless because of the lack of water.

The bucket brigade followed and the packing houses of W. H. Mouser and Company and the American Fruit Growers, adjoining, were saved. Two of the three houses destroyed were valued at $16,000. No estimate was available on the third.

Armistice Day

Eleven Years After

The bright years, flee by forgetting. Glad of escape from war-torn memories . . . flash of flame, scream of cannon, dread feet marching, marching . . .

The prospering years flee by remembering. Broken lives that rest on foreign shores . . . the gallant host who returned to a changing world to take up unfamiliar tasks with unaccustomed hands.

Eleven Years After, the dreary debacle of the World War has softened into history and human intelligences have irrevocably pledged themselves to peace, unforgetting, ever,

"If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow in Flanders Fields!"

RICH'S

Do you play bridge?

THE chap who overbids his hand always loses in the long run. No person can continually bid what he hasn't got and make it.

Business in one way is something like a game of bridge . . . with merchants and manufacturers playing for your patronage. You want furniture and breakfast foods, books and clothes, radios, cigarettes and toys—they want to sell you theirs. They bid with advertising.

The merchant who advertises an unworthy product can't win. He is simply inducing more people to find out in a shorter time how poor it is. He is overbidding his hand, and is bound to get set. Losing is too costly . . . depend upon it, products that are advertised must be good!

The advertisements in The Constitution are guides to the finest merchandise of every sort, merchandise carefully and faithfully made, of certain, honest value. You can trust the manufacturers who write them.

It pays to read Constitution advertisements.
They are bids backed by products that can compete in the open . . . and win.

Housebroken

BY PAUL HERVEY FOX

SYNOPSIS.
Tom Davies, football star of a small eastern college, plays brilliantly in his last game. After the battle Bruce Stevens, his roommate, asks him to go to the dance that night to escort a girl who'd been asked down to the college for him. Bruce explains that he wishes to avoid meeting one of the chaperons. Tom agrees to substitute for him. The girl, Suzanne Branch, makes an instantaneous appeal to him. She tells Tom that she is engaged to marry a friend of her father's. After she leaves, Tom writes to her. Before the Christmas holidays Tom meets Suzanne in New York. Suzanne breaks her engagement to the other man when she and Tom realize they love each other and Suzanne invites Tom to her home to meet her family. Suzanne goes down to the college for commencement.
After graduation Tom's father gives him a small house at Stamford as a wedding present.

INSTALLMENT VII. THE FIRST CLOUD.

There now remained the task of buying things. Extraordinary the way that house refused to be filled. It was worse than the car. And Suzanne remembered everything, things like egg-beaters, for instance, and ash trays.

It was a happy time, and Tom loved the eagerness in Suzanne's face, her anxious and usually absurd economies. She, too, was happy, and she even had a useful smile for calamity. She could make a joke out of the way things went wrong, when they occasionally did.

"I'll drive you to the station every morning, darling," she had said when he hesitated at the distance of the small house. "Then I'll do my shopping. In the evening I'll drive down to meet your train. I'll love doing that, I really will."

A fascinating prospect! There remained only the matter of getting a job. He had not worried himself very greatly about this. He had those qualities of "steadiness and loyalty" which spoke instantly for him.

Sometimes before his marriage, Joe Galbraith's father made a place for him in the linoleum business, and in a month or so Tom was raised to a salary that he could at least scrape a living out of. It rather galled him to see Joe come into the office at all hours, his talk full of girls and his morning-after headache. Joe had deteriorated steadily, and his chief interest in life was to go on wild parties.

Tom did, however, at this period have considerable time on his hands, and to kill it he fell into the habit of playing poker at the club. Two or three evenings a week he would sit up until one or two, with a pile of chips in front of him, a cigar in his teeth. He played conservatively and came out a winner more often than otherwise.

With his big muscles and his habit of exercise, the city proved something of an ordeal. He went to a gymnasium for a while, but to his surprise with bald men chiefly engaged in working out punches took some of the zest out of that game. In the end he took his exercise viciously like a true New Yorker, and Madison Square Garden saw him on nights when there was a fairly good prize-fight to be seen.

Outside of poker and prize fighting he had no interests. He did not care much for books and theaters.

He and Suzanne were married in November and went to Bermuda for their honeymoon.

In that island with its air of being a back-drop in some perfectly produced musical comedy, with its candy box colors, its beaches and roads and moonlight, it seemed to him his ecstasy could never die.

He was convinced that marriage was the greatest thing in the world, that anyone who wasn't married was to be pitied. He thought of Bruce, he had heard from him once, an incomprehensible letter from Shanghai, which crowded unfamiliar names in a few curt pages. Bruce thought he was getting the best of life! Bruce had talked about giving up one's freedom! As if marriage had anything to do with that. Having been married two weeks, Tom knew better.

And in a hundred little ways the girl he had fallen in love with endeared herself to him. He had gained importance in his own eyes, because he was so important in hers. If he died tonight, who of his friends would really grieve? But Suzanne would rather have died herself. Her capacity for devotion astonished him. He wondered how it was possible for a girl to love him as much as she did, to know so much about him, to keep thinking of him perpetually.

It was pleasant to return and to begin his life together in the house in Connecticut, their first home.

In the mornings, by the time he had his shower, his breakfast would be on the table, perfectly cooked eggs, and long strips of bacon and strong coffee, served on the china that Helen Hedges had extravagantly bought for them. Then he would drive to the station at better than 50, with the wind blowing Suzanne's hair, and the old car roaring like a locomotive. He would kiss Suzanne quickly, just before he reached the station. The next moment he was on the platform, had purchased a paper, had nodded to a fellow commuter here and there, a respectable citizen. He had begun to wear into his groove.

From the first Suzanne adored her small home, and worried about it, and did strange, inspired things to make it friendly and inviting. She would pore for hours over a cook book, and she enjoyed cooking itself, though now and then she tucked an apron around Tom and pressed him into service as a dish dryer.

Seriously their life paced on, as if nothing in the world could happen. . . . One Wednesday evening after he had been married almost two months, it occurred to Tom to drop into his club. His poker playing acquaintances greeted him effusively, insisted on his joining them. In the end he called up Suzanne.

He had forgotten what it was like—this gathering together of a group of men with cards in their fingers, blue smoke rising to the ceiling, a glass or two on the table, the curt, hearty talk, the masculine humor. He enjoyed himself so much that he was surprised.

He caught the last train home and took a taxi to the house. A light was burning in the upper windows.

Suzanne was sitting with her chin in her hand, her back toward him. Extraordinary, the infinite range of expression in a back! He guessed everything in that first glance.

Nevertheless he assumed a cheerful voice.

"What's the matter? Anything happened?"

She turned and threw an indignant, a furious glance at him.

"How dare you! O, how dare you!" she exclaimed in a choking voice.

He put his hand gently on her arm, and she threw it off with a violent movement. Getting to her feet, she confronted him. Her voice, at first angry and trembling with nervousness, gradually lost all control, grew almost wild.

"I've done everything—everything I could. And now, when we've been together just two months, you're leaving me! I—I'm not going to stand it! I'm going to leave you right now. O, I don't care what you say! I'm not going to have my life ruined!"

"But, darling, I was only playing a little poker—"

"Poker," she burst out. "You're gambling—I know where that will end! I know the kind of men who gamble. I suppose you went out and saw a lot of girls afterwards. Well, go ahead; you can do just as you please, because I'm going to do what I please, too, from now on!"

The illogicality and utter absurdity of her accusations were too much for him. He was unwise enough to laugh.

Then she started for the door, stopping to catch up a coat. He forced her back into a chair, and she screamed.

"Please, Suzanne," he pleaded. "The neighbors—people might hear you—"

Tears streamed down her excited face. "What do I care?" she cried. "Do you think it matters? And how dare you keep me here? Do you think I won't get away? I'll go in the morning! I'll find some man who'll take care of me—you'll see! Nothing in the world will keep me here after this!"

Bulldogs Okay After Big Game

New York, November 10.—No injuries of consequence were sustained by the Bulldogs in their game Saturday with New York University. Coach Harry Mehre said today. Careful check revealed that Marion Dickens' knee injury was probably not serious and that Bryant was in pretty fair shape. "We are in better condition right now than we were last week after the Tulane game," Coach Mehre said. "If we have no bad luck in the Auburn game we will be in good shape for the last two contests."

By Ed Danforth,
Constitution Sports Editor.
New York, N. Y., November 10.—Wearing a bruise on every pore, the Georgia Bulldogs tonight are hurrying home in a surprisingly sound frame of mind for a football team that has lost three straight games. The Bulldogs lost convincingly and thoroughly to Florida. They waged a terrific battle with Tulane and lost by a one touchdown margin. And the immediate past is brightened by having shown a big New York crowd plenty of football in a spirited last half rally that fell short of New York University's early lead.

The Bulldogs arrive tomorrow morning in Athens in time for classes. In the afternoon they must begin preparations to play Auburn on Friday. It is extremely fortunate for the Georgia cause that Auburn is not strong this year. The Plainsmen offer the first semblance of an easy game the Bulldogs have had since they defeated Yale.

After Auburn come Alabama and Georgia Tech. Regardless of the four defeats on the books to date there is a bright chance for the Red Hats to make a big season out of it yet. Georgia's display of offensive strength in the last half naturally appealed to the New York crowd and those who did not leave the stadium at the half remained to cheer for the Bulldogs as if they had been homefolks.

Checking back over the old notebook one finds that Georgia really did more than play good football in the last half. The Bulldogs carried all the offensive burden from the middle of the second period. The Violet attack, while potent, was limited. Two long runs from scrimmage and two vigorous off-tackle smash and cutback netted them two touchdowns. A Georgia fumble at close range and an intercepted forward pass gave the Violet two more. All the rest of the tramping was done by Georgia.

ONE PLAY DID IT.
Yet that very circumstance makes the achievement of the Violets all the more creditable. They had one play that worked and they pumped it for two touchdowns. On their two breaks they struck with decision and great spirit. Chick Mehan certainly had the big team playing its collective head off and his boys had nothing left with which to fight in the last half.

Metropolitan newspapers, barring, of course, the tabloids, commented favorably on Georgia's showing. William D. Richardson in the Times wrote, "Going into the final period trailing by 20 points, Georgia began tossing forward passes and the crowd of 42,000 spectators thrilled to the boiling point but almost snatched victory out of the jaws of defeat. Not until Smith, the Georgia end, missed his try for point after touchdown in the closing minutes of the game was the Violet victory assured. If he had made that one the southerners would have had a chance to tie."

Just the same the visitors gave a good account of themselves and a little more strategy on their part at different stages of the game might have changed the result. Outplayed in the line for the first period when N. Y. U. made its best showing and got a 13-point lead, the southerners spruced up after that and actually outplayed the winners in the last two periods. The game was one of the most spectacular played here in many a day.

Al Marsters' Lead Still Holds Good

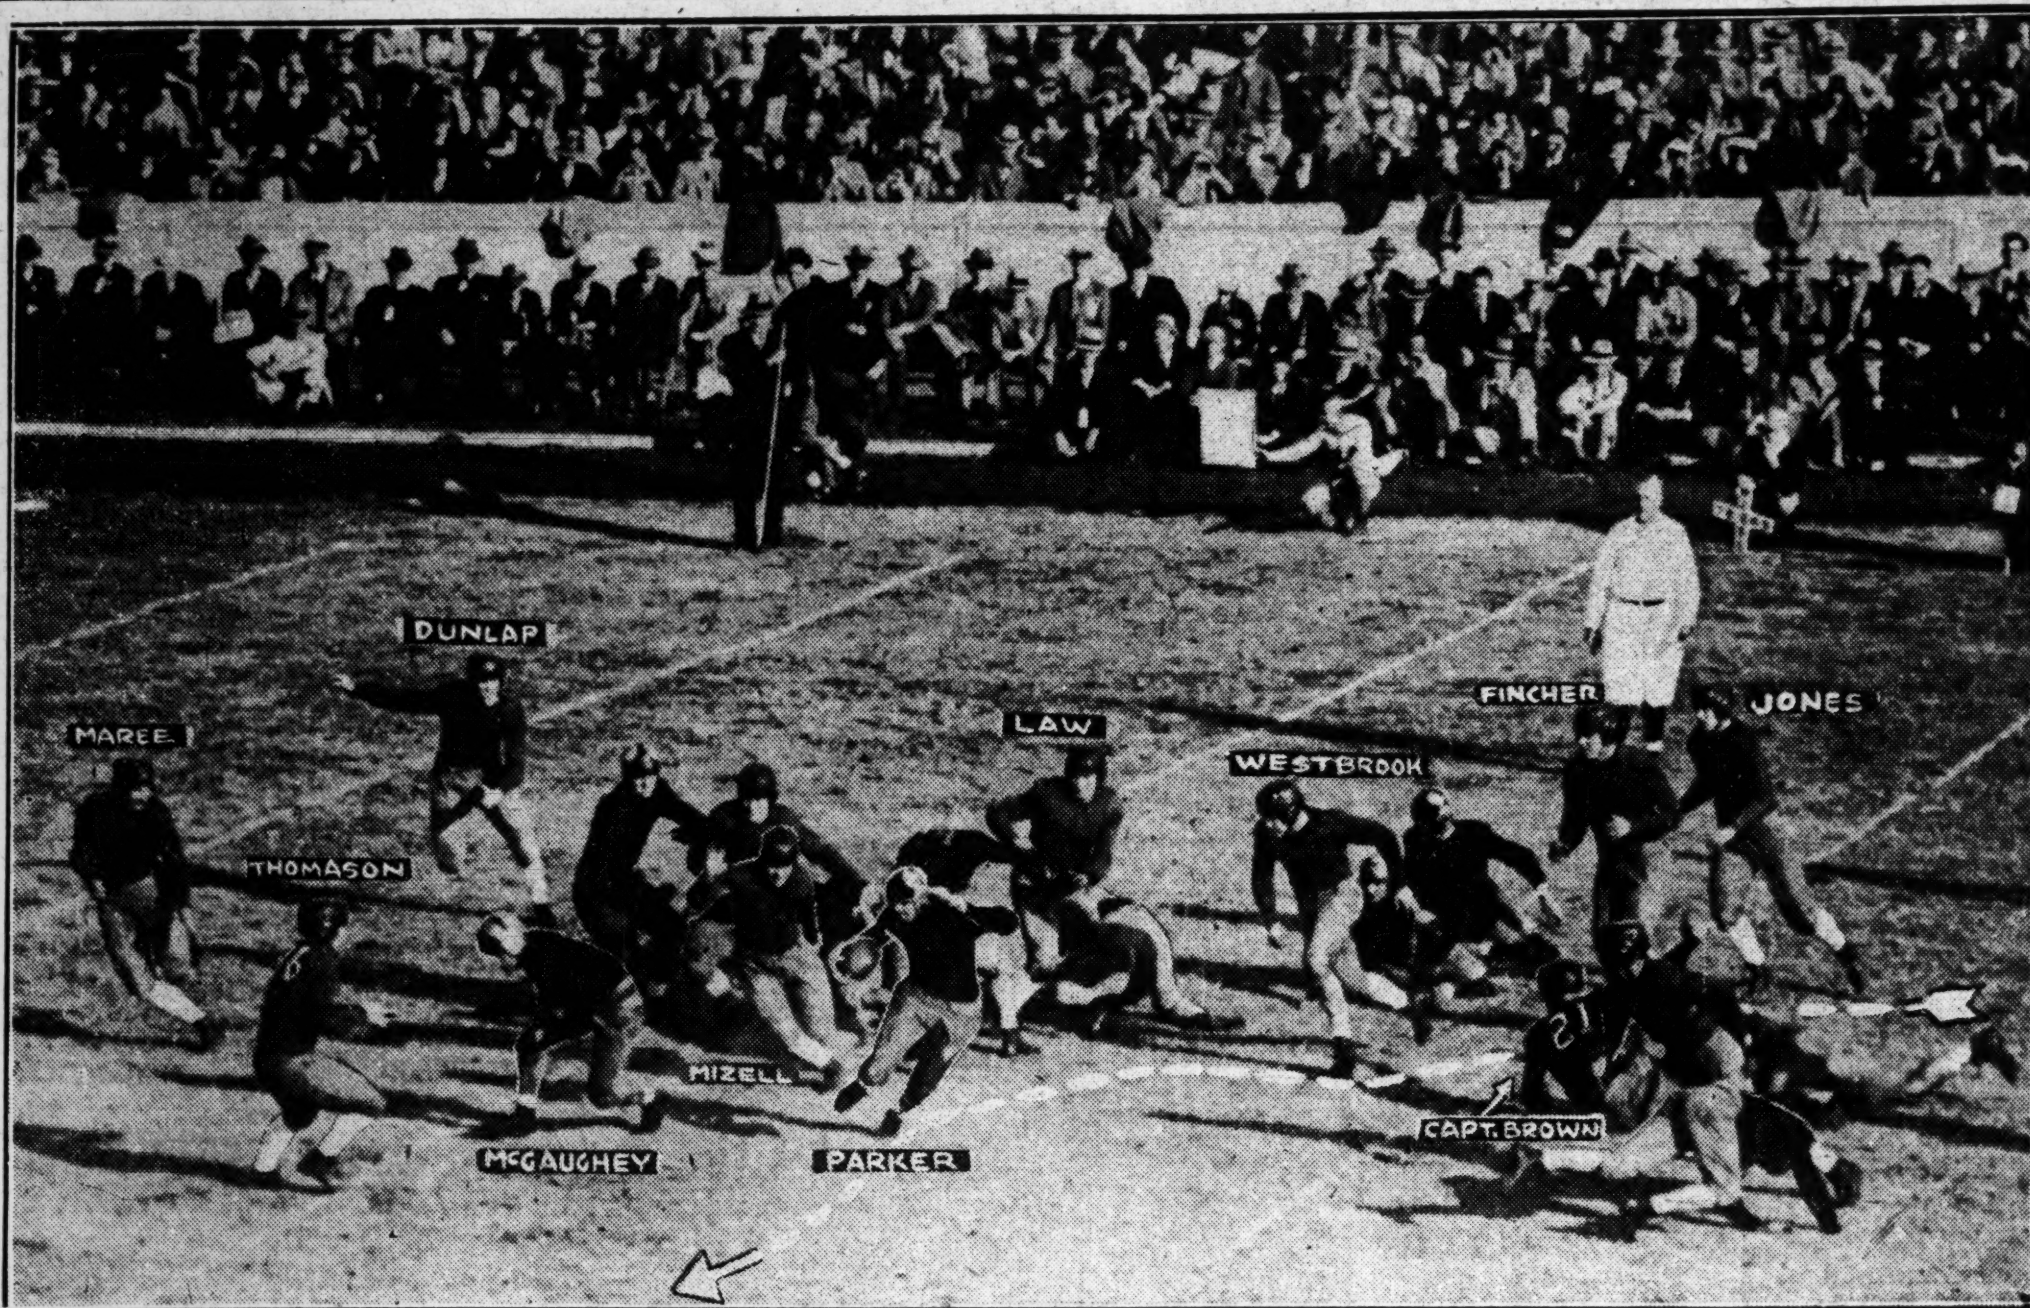

New York, November 10.—(United News.)—Although he has completed his college football career as a result of an injury one week ago, Al Marsters, of Dartmouth, continues to lead the eastern point-makers in football. Marsters has a total of 108 points. Although he did not play yesterday and will not play in either of the remaining games, it appears that nobody will be able to overtake him in the race for individual point-making honors.

Dowler, of Colgate, and Hinkle, of Bucknell, are tied for second with 66 points each.

Standings of the three leaders:

This Picture Tells Important Part of Tech-Vanderbilt Story

As involved as this play appears, Parker got through for 22 yards on this action and it paved the way for Vanderbilt's second touchdown of the day. The Commodore fullback got the ball on Tech's 43-yard line and was down on the 21-yard line. At this point, Johnny Askew got the ball on the next play and swept around right end and over the goal line. McGaughey, who played a whale of a game, can be seen preparing to block the Tech secondary. Westbrook, Tech guard, was close on Parker's heels, but failed to reach him. Mizell, also, has been left in the rear. This was Parker's longest run of the day and he displayed a great elusiveness, evading a swarm of would-be tacklers.

New York, November 10.—Out of what looked like a jostling throng clamoring around the dais for recognition as conference champion, three teams burst into the open Saturday and now stand shoulder to shoulder.

While Tulane was coasting through Auburn in neutral and thus extending their joyride another week, and while Tennessee was shadow boxing with that passive sparring partner, Carson-Newman, Vanderbilt galloped up on horseback over the prostrate forms of the Yellow Jackets to demand a settlement.

Kentucky cracked wide open before the Crimson Tide and was drowned. And Louisiana State, sole hope of the conference to stop Tulane, landed with a noisy blow on the canvas, with Duke on top. Alabama and Duke took out two challengers and cleared away a lot of underbrush thereby. The conference question is simplified from this point on.

ONE MUST GO.
Vanderbilt and Tennessee meet next Saturday and one of them will be retired for the season. If Vanderbilt wins, nothing can prevent the Commodores from finishing with a clean slate for the Commodores will have only the Thanksgiving Day formality with Sewanee to go through.

If Tennessee defeats Vanderbilt—and there is a chance of that thing happening—the Vols still will have Kentucky to contend with. And of course Kentucky has a chance to recover from the dismay of defeat by Alabama and become a good football team again.

Either Vanderbilt or Tennessee will be down there at the finish to contest with Tulane for popular favor as the champion, unless Tennessee beats Vanderbilt and loses to Kentucky. In that case Tulane will be left alone with an unspotted record and none to dispute her claim.

NOT AN UPSET.
Vanderbilt's defeat of Georgia Tech was by no means an upset. Few imagined the score either way would reach such proportions as 23 to 7. By no figuring could the Commodores be accused of scoring at long odds.

Your Uncle Daniel McGugin said to me a week ago after his team had defeated Alabama, "It is just about once or twice in a season that a team can play football like we played today. We can't expect to do that well every week." From the proportions of the score and lacking full details, I hazard a guess the Commodores played his sort of game just once more. Coach Daniel may have sought to key his boys for Alabama and Tech on successive Saturdays but note this on the cuff: His boys will need no special keying to make them play football against Tennessee.

The Commodore flesh may be weak next Saturday but the spirit will be there.

It has been a good many seasons since both Tech and Georgia have reached mid-November with four defeats on the record. That comes from attempting more difficult schedules than the others with ordinarily good teams. It takes no great flight

P. G. A. MEETING TO OPEN TODAY

Officials of Association
Have Two-Day Meet
in Atlanta.

With Alex Pirie, of Chicago, president; Joe Mitchell, of New York, secretary; Mrs. Blakeman, recording secretary; Willie Ogg, of Worcester, Mass., and many delegates already in town, everything is all set for the opening of the annual Professional Golfers' Association meeting this morning at the Ansley hotel.

Two days will be devoted to the annual meeting of executives and delegates from 22 sections of the P. G. A. are expected to be in attendance. Charlie Hall, of Birmingham, president of the Southeastern P. G. A., will represent this section. He arrived in town Sunday and completed arrangements for dinner which will be given tonight at 7 o'clock at the Capital City Club. The Southeastern P. G. A. will be hosts at the dinner, which will be informal.

Practically all of today will be given over to the general routine matters, pertaining to the executive office. Officers will be elected Tuesday and the selection of a place for the 1930 National Professional Golfers' Association tournament will be made Tuesday.

Howard Beckett, professional at the Capital City Club, is in charge of the local reception committee and will be one of the delegates from this section. Beckett is a former president of the Southeastern section.

With no chance to secure the open amateur, or women's championship tournament for next year, a strong effort will be made at the meeting to secure the National Professional Golfers' tournament here. The tournament will bring practically all of the leading golf professionals of the country here and Atlanta will have the opportunity to see how the instructors play golf themselves.

A large number of the delegates arrived last Sunday night and went immediately to the Ansley, which will be headquarters for the two-day meeting.

Cardinals Rule Pacific Coast

San Francisco, November 10.—(United News.)—The 53-to-13 triumph of California over Montana Saturday enabled the Golden Bears to retain their rating as the only undefeated team in the Pacific Coast conference, their scoreless tie with St. Mary's at the start of the season being the only black mark out of the win column.

Records of the leading teams in all games they have played are:

In conference standings Stanford and U. S. C. are tied.

Like Blue Bottles, Dixie Teams Fall

Vandy and Tennessee Stand Out as "the Boys" in Race For Conference Honors.

By Ralph McGill.
There used to be an old drinking song about ninety-nine blue bottles a-hanging on the wall. It went on to say that if you took one down and the rest didn't fall there'd be ninety-eight blue bottles a-hanging on the wall.

Far be it from me to connect the Southern conference up with a drinking song, especially with the Carnegie Foundation men around and the enforcement officers busy but the thought just occurred that of all the brave twenty-three who were a-hanging on the conference wall every last one has fallen but Vanderbilt, Tennessee and Tulane, two Tennessee eleven and one from Louisiana.

The championship will likely be decided by the Vanderbilt-Tennessee game next Saturday at Knoxville, but any such suggestion is sure to bring an agonized protest from New Orleans, where rolls the Green Wave. The Greenies are even going in for comparative scores. They kept their stars in Saturday against Auburn just so they could say they had doubled Tennessee's score against Auburn. That score was made in the mud and with the stars on the bench a great portion of time, but the prospects of a championship claim has the Crescent City by the ears. They are that excited.

OH, SO SOFT.
Tulane, with that very comfortable schedule, resembling an overfed pig in its softness, will recover from the strain of the 52-to-0 victory over Auburn in time to take on Sewanee, another one of the weak sisters who fell off the conference wall a long time ago.

There are just two big games to be played this week in the conference. They happen to be the Vanderbilt-Tennessee game and the Tulane-Tennessee game which will decide the title, and the Alabama-Tech game at Atlanta.

Vanderbilt had Thomas and Parker injured about the shoulders in the Tech game, which the Commodores won right handily with Mouse Leonard on the loose, but they are expected to be ready for the Vols.

NOT SO HOT.
Most of the Tennessee stars were in the stands at the Tech game Saturday and they were not so impressed with the Commodores. For, truth to tell, the Jackets were tired and worn and the Commodores managed to look very much eaten indeed in the second half. The Tennessee football players were very courteous. They were grinning just like a gent who is about to sit down to his Christmas dinner.

The Commodores are likely to bounce up with an inspired game against the Vols. It should be quite a battle.

Alabama's one-man offense at last scored a touchdown and won from Kentucky, upsetting the dope a bit but not a great deal. The Tide will roll into Atlanta a top-heavy favorite but if the gamblers care for a word of warning it is not to make the odds so very, very short on the Jackets. They were just 11 tired boys Saturday who got together for one gallant rush to score. Next week with the injured recovered they will be feeling a different above Alabama.

THE LITTLE GIANT.
Next to Amos Leonard, the red-headed sophomore who bewildered the

PITT LEADING EASTERN RACE

Cornell and Western Maryland Close Behind First Runners.

New York, November 10.—(P)—Pittsburgh remained at the top of the eastern football heap today as a result of its decisive 21-to-0 victory over Washington and Jefferson, seventh successive victory of the Panthers this season. Cornell, also undefeated and untied, held its place a stride behind Pittsburgh, choosing Western Reserve for its sixth triumph in a 36-to-0 game. The third undefeated and untied eleven, Western Maryland, had an open date to be followed tomorrow by a game against St. John's of Annapolis.

Dartmouth retained the lead in eastern team scoring, running its total to 281. Others in the 200 class are: Colgate, 262; Syracuse, 253, and Pittsburgh, 223. No eastern team has an unbroken goal line.

The outstanding performance was contributed by Maryland, which tied Yale, 13-13. Oglethorpe upset Manhattan College, 14-3. Georgia's sophomores bowed to New York University, 27-19; Purdue won from Mississippi, 27-7; and Michigan State got a 35-19 victory over Mississippi A. & M.

Citadel and Furman featured proceedings in the S. I. A. A. by battling to a 0-0 tie to further complicate the championship race. Chattanooga routed Howard, 20-14, and Centre continued to win with a 41-0 triumph over Louisville.

Fighters Clash Tonight at Gym

Atlanta fight fans will see plenty of action at 8:30 o'clock tonight in Roby's gymnasium at 38 1-2 Decatur street, in the second of a series of elimination boxing contests for prospective young "tugs."

Battling Madrox and Irish Brannon will fight eight rounds in the main attraction on the card which contains 32 rounds of mixing. Dennis O'Neil and Lou Tronky will fight six rounds in the semi-windup. Other fights are Buck Huchaby vs. Jack New, six rounds; Paul Martin vs. Frankie Allen, six rounds; and Ted Lewis vs. Eddie Belcher, four rounds.

The eliminations are being promoted by C. E. Carter and are open to every prize fighter in and near Atlanta. They are being promoted for the purpose of developing and helping the boxing game in the city.

Each of the fighters has agreed to give his best services at all times and there will be no stalling. In case there is any "stalling" the fighters will be barred from other fights in the city and it will also have an influence on their fighting in other cities.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

The passing of the Kentucky Wildcats from the conference championship picture marked the over the week-end developments in the frenzied southern football race.

A powerful Alabama team, which has been threatening to get going all season, started clicking and eliminated the Wildcats by a score of 24 to 13.

With Kentucky out, the championship field has been narrowed to three teams—Tulane, Vanderbilt and Tennessee. Duke also is undefeated, but the Blue Devils are too far in the rear to catch up.

In wrecking Kentucky's hopes, Alabama trotted out a couple of All-Southern contenders in Tony Holm, the smashing fullback, who scored three of the four Tide touchdowns, and Fred Singler, a fine old scoring guard, whose defensive work played havoc with the Kentucky offense.

VANDY SPURTS.

While Kentucky was falling out of line Vanderbilt continued its spurt toward the crown by giving Georgia Tech the worst drubbing the Yellow Jackets have taken from a Southern team in many years.

Faced by Red Leonard, their young sophomore backfield star, the Commodores turned back the Tide's 23 to 7. Leonard stiff-armed his way 53 yards through the Tide team for one touchdown and a 35-yard pass and another 20-yard run accounted for the others.

Tulane continued its ruthless march by running wild over the luckless Auburn Platoon. The Commodore collection, ranging up four touchdowns and now threatens Gene McEever, the Southern leader, for conference scoring honors.

DUKE WINS DEBUT.

Duke, after losing four straight decisions to eastern eleveners, came back home and bowed its way into conference honors with a 22-0 win over Louisiana State, and North Carolina turned the annual battle of the Carolinas into a rout by walloping South Carolina, 40-0.

Tigers have not yet recovered from that 44-6 slaughter at the hands of Kentucky and lost to Virginia Military, 12-0, and Virginia Poly gave Virginia a fine old pasting to the tune of 31-12.

Some of the teams which warred outside the conference were successful and some were not.

NONPHOMORES.

Tennessee used sophomores to crush Carson-Newman, 73-0, and Washington and Lee trounced St. John's of Annapolis, 18-6, but Davidson turned the tables on North Carolina State, 13-0, and Sewanee was licked 9-0 by Southwestern of Memphis, an S. I. A. outfit.

When the intersection returns were posted the east and west had the south two down. In five engagements, Dixie teams won one and tied one.

The outstanding performance was contributed by Maryland, which tied Yale, 13-13. Oglethorpe upset Manhattan College, 14-3. Georgia's sophomores bowed to New York University, 27-19; Purdue won from Mississippi, 27-7; and Michigan State got a 35-19 victory over Mississippi A. & M.

Max To Accept $250,000 Bout

Berlin, November 10.—(P)—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, announced today that he would accept an offer of $250,000 with a privilege of 50 per cent of the gate receipts for a 15-round bout with the best available opponent in the new convention hall in Atlantic City, N. J., probably in March. The offer was brought to him by Joe Jacobs, American manager, from Bob Guinnis and Herman Taylor, Philadelphia promoters.

Schmeling said he would sign articles upon his return to the United States in January if the guarantee was posted to his satisfaction in advance. Schmeling is nursing an injured ankle and plans a three weeks' rest in Italy before sailing.

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN No. 73

"I tell you what I'll do," explained the mate. "I'll just whack up with the two men who help me. And the sooner I quit her, the better I like it. Are you with me?" Now Kai Shang had sailed on a number of English ships, so he understood fairly well all that had passed between the two plotters since he had stumbled upon them. A woman—and gold! Into his knavish soul flashed an idea. Here was a chance to increase his booty!

Kai Shang rose to his feet and stepped into the clearing. The mate and his companion started and reached for their revolvers. But the burly Chinese raised his right hand, palm forward, as a sign of his pacific intentions. "I am a friend," he said. "I heard you. But do not fear I will betray you. I can help you and you can help me. Here was a chance to increase his booty!"

"We need men to help us navigate her. Come with us and ask no questions. Bring the woman of whom you speak and we will ask no questions either. Is it a bargain?" The fellows from the Kincaid followed Kai Shang to his camp and after a parley in which plans were agreed upon, departed well pleased at the stroke of good fortune that had come to them. They were to leave the island in a sea-worthy craft!

Kai Shang promised his assistance in capturing the woman, or rather women, for when he learned there was also a Mogula woman in the other camp he insisted she be brought along with the white woman. The day following was set for the doing of the deed, and the Kincaid's mate now began to plan how he was to clear the camp so that Lady Greystone would be left alone and at the mercy of the cunning Kai Shang.
